

Stories of Who I Am

Name: _____

Our identities come from a combination of many factors: Culture, family, peers, and infinite individual pieces. We get to decide many things about our identities, especially as we get older, though our identities begin with many external influences.

Objects, or artifacts, can represent meaning and facets of our identities.

Together, we will brainstorm ideas about what you might be able to use as an artifact for each category. You will choose four different artifacts that represent different parts of your identity. If you cannot physically bring them, please take a photograph (or draw) the object.

Class Brainstorm: Artifacts

In the table below, write down what object you are choosing for each category. Explain the significance of each one - how does it represent you in each context? (Point form is fine!)

Artifact that represents you as an individual:
Artifact that represents your familial belonging:

Artifact that represents your peer group belonging:

Artifact that represents other cultural identities:
